

I first met Randy White when he was the pastor of my church. He was always having youth group activities at his house, so we all spent a lot of time in his home hanging out, having fun, and growing in our faith. In addition to Randy being my pastor for several years, he is also my neighbor. My friends and I spent many afternoons swimming in his pond and having bonfires with him in the yard. Lastly, I worked for Randy for about three years. I had the keys to their home and would clean it once a week, so I spent a lot of time around the Whites and their home.

Randy has always been an extreme man of faith. He is one of the most kind and compassionate people that I have ever met. He would give a stranger the clothes off of his back. He loves his Lord with all his heart and soul. He is very consistent in his beliefs, and his faith is central in everything that he does. In all the time that I spent around Randy, he became a good friend and mentor. I know that he cares about the people around him more than he cares about himself. His faith in Jesus Christ is exhibited in all he does and says. This love for others and for the Lord is seen by all, but especially by those who are close to him. I feel that since I spent so much time in the White's household that I would see if there were inconsistencies in Randy's behavior, and there are none. I am confident that he is a righteous man of God, and that he is working toward a better society by caring so much about others.
