Re: Lieutenant Governor Candidate 2010

To the voters of Illinois;

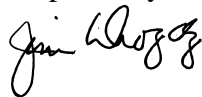

I am writing on behalf of a solid Christian man who is making a difference in Hancock County. This same man, who feels led by God, now wants to make a difference in our state. Who am I? I am nobody, but if you must know, I am a former Illinois State Police officer turned state's attorney. Randy and I live in a small community, Randy's former church board president and his elders live on each side of him. If there were any inconsistencies in his life, not only I, but the whole county would know it. There are none!

I know this man very well. He truly stands on Biblical principles and nothing else. This man, Pastor Randy White, resigned his church in December, 2005 to help Christians get elected into office. Now, after praying with family, Pastors, Elders, and their wives, he, himself is seeking political office as Illinois' next Lieutenant Governor in 2010.

Please give Randy your consideration. You might be saying 2010 is a long way off, by why wait? The evil forces that brought us same sex marriage and abortion are not waiting. These forces are actively gnawing away at the very moral fabric that delicately binds our society together.

There are many ways you can become involved, from raising funds for his campaign organizing, events, to spreading the word. If you share in Randy's vision and want to make a difference in our state government, contact Randy at rwhite4ltgov@frontiernet.net.

Respectfully,
